To whom it may concern -

I am a creator of an educational childrens television show called "Out to See". We launched our show on NCTV 18 our local station in Nantucket MA. Access to our local station, it's equipment and knowledgeable staff have been essential in making this show come to life, as well as many other creative and informative projects.

I strongly disagree with the rule changes proposed by the Federal Communications Commission, where cable providers would be able to count the value of the PEG stations themselves toward the fee they pay to local communities.

This act would dry up funding, cutting off the voices that inform us. Both full- and part-time residents keep tabs on local government through PEG stations.

What serves everyone best is when corporations work with the communities they serve to foster a reciprocal relationship. Rather than cutting funding, there should be more funds allocated to community PEG stations. The need for public awareness, local journalism and multimedia education cannot be overstated at this time.

Sincerely,
Sue Riddle
